From the Publisher: We hope that everyone is having a safe and restful summer. The heat (and the smoke) is oppressive in many parts of North America at the moment, but perhaps the atmospheric noise is permitting some good DX even during the summer months.

The 44th Edition of the NRC AM Log will be available in early August. Details on how to preorder will be available (hopefully by the time you see this); please subscribe to the IRCA e-mail list (see page 23 for how to sign up) or check our web site at www.nationalradioclub.org for the latest updates.

As users of the FCC web site will know, the ongoing migration to the new electronic filing system has resulted in quite a mess in the online databases. When we last checked in with AM Query, a good 5-10% of all licensed AM stations were simply missing, and many recent call changes and construction permit activity is not reflected in the stations that are there.

However, we do still have very good access to real-time filings regarding CPs and STAs, and even prompter access to call changes as they are requested and approved, even if the new calls aren't showing up in the searchable databases for months after they've been approved and used on the air. Keep up with us in AM Switch and in the new Log when it's published and you'll have it all.

From the Archives

75 Years Ago: From the July 31, 1948 issue of DX News: The NRC convention is scheduled for Labor Day weekend in Buffalo; the $3.00 registration fee covers both the restaurant dinner and the lunch at Pop Edge's home. Eldon Addy of Marcus, Iowa won the annual contest and also will be taking over as CPC chairman from Len Kruse.

50 Years Ago: From August 8, 1973 issue of DX News: Among the new members of the NRC is Jon Pearkins of Burnaby, BC. The newly formed New Jersey Publishing Committee will take over publication of DX News in October; Russ

Edmunds, Page Taylor, and Steve Bohac will be in the lead.

25 Years Ago: From the July 20, 1998 issue of DX News: This is the first issue of DX News to be produced completely electronically, with no cutting and pasting paper materials involved! It was laid out in Pagemaker 6.52 and printed on a Laserwriter IIg.

10 Years Ago: From the July 8, 2013 issue of DX News: The joint NRC/IRCA/WTFDA convention is set for Minneapolis, August 1 to 4.

All DX News back issues through Volume 89 are available online at <https://nationalradioclub.org/dx-news-archives/>.

--- NOTES FROM CANADA ---

Jon Pearkins jon@pearkins.com

Canada's largest phone company, Bell Canada, has signed off, or announced the pending sale of, most of their AM stations. Regular programming ended, and staff was escorted out of their respective buildings, simultaneously across the country at 1100 EDT on June 14th. Transmitter shutdowns were staggered based on the availability of local engineering staff. In the interim (at least 24 hours), all stations played an announcement explaining the end of regular programming, then the Steve Baker instrumental "Multitask" followed by the same announcement, in a continuous loop. In theory, all the stations face CRTC disciplinary action as the instrumental was not Canadian Content, leaving them below their required CanCon for their last broadcast week. Steve Baker is an Australian currently living in the United Kingdom.

- 580 CFRA ON Ottawa – Staff has voted to unionize with CWA (Communications Workers of America) Canada on June 16th. CFRA is owned by Bell Canada.
- 580 CKWW ON Windsor – Bell plans to sell this station, conditional upon CRTC approval.

- 690 CBOI ON Ear Falls – FM transmitter is on the air and CBOI is now in its final 90-day window of simulcasting before the AM transmitter is removed.
- 820 CHAM ON Hamilton – Bell plans to sell this station, conditional upon CRTC approval.
- 1040 CKST BC Vancouver – WHO Des Moines, Iowa is a lot easier to hear now the CKST is off the air. The current station was formed by the merger of CIMA-1040 and CKST-800 in 1992, and almost immediately applied to move to FM, but was denied. CKST-800 began as CJJC-850 Langley BC in 1963, founded by legendary C&W announcer Joe Chesney.
- 1050 CJNB SK North Battleford – Back on the air June 15th after about a week dealing with transmitter issues. It is unclear if they ran into additional problems the same day, as XEG was all alone in Edmonton late on the evening of June 15th.
- 1060 CKMX AB Calgary – The former CFCN is no longer on the air. It traces its roots through founder William Walter Westaver Grant to a small station he constructed in Halifax in 1919. CFCN originally signed on in Calgary in 1922.
- 1150 CKOC ON Hamilton – Bell plans to sell this station, conditional upon CRTC approval.
- 1260 CFRN AB Edmonton – Alberta's most northerly AM station is no longer on the air. Edmonton had only three radio stations during World War II, CFRN, CJCA and CKUA, which were all CBC affiliates at that time. CJCA and CKUA were taken off the air by their respective owners in the 1990s, returning under new ownership a few months later. But CFRN is unlikely to find a new owner, as Bell is surrendering its license rather than putting it up for sale. CFRN debuted with new owner and its current call letters in 1934. It had previously been CFTP but was first signed on as CHMA (CHristian Missionary Alliance) with 100 Watts on Easter Sunday 1927. CHMA shared 580 kHz with other Edmonton stations.
- 1290 CFRW MB Winnipeg – Signed off forever by Bell. CFRW began as CJQM AM and FM in 1963, owned by CHQM AM and FM in Vancouver, in an attempt to replicate CHQM's success. Oddly enough, CJQM AM and FM was sold to another Vancouver station, CJOR, in 1970, and the call letters were changed to CFRW AM and FM. The CJQM-FM automation machine, rumored to be Serial #5 from IGM in Bellingham, Washington, was not part of the sale, and was redeployed to CHQM-FM in Vancouver, where it annoyed and confused existing staff, but did prompt the hiring of a Computer Science student (me).
- 1290 CJBK ON London – Bell also signed this station off the air forever in June.
- 1380 CKPC ON Brantford – CRTC renewed this license until August 31, 2030. 95% of its music must be non-classical religious. 15% must be Canadian content.
- 1410 CFTE BC Vancouver – As CFUN, CKVN and CKMO, the station was a favorite of many listeners over its long history before signing off forever in June. The station's association with the Spratt-Shaw Schools links it to some of the earliest Vancouver radio stations, which came on the air as part of a war between the three daily newspapers to see who could be first.
- 6030 CFVP AB Calgary – This 100 Watt shortwave repeater of CKMX-1060 is also off the air forever.

There have been some rumors that the programming of some or all of the now off-air Bell AM stations has survived on the Internet, or on the Vancouver and Victoria FM HD channels where the Vancouver AM stations were simulcast. This is definitely not the case.

Forcing automakers to include AM reception in their entertainment systems for vehicles sold in the U.S. will almost certainly ensure that Canadian vehicles retain AM because of the high costs associated with country-specific changes to vehicles. Beyond those of us who are Nostalgic about AM, syndicators of programming that airs on AM are actively pushing for federal legislation in the U.S. to keep AM in the car. Or truck, in the case of Red Eye Radio. But you had to read the last paragraph of Steve Forbes' recent Forbes editorial "Don't Muzzle AM Radio!" to realize his major concern: "... talk radio has been absolutely crucial to getting conservative views across to listeners in an otherwise increasingly hostile environment."

The Facebook page Canadian Radio News by Dan Sys provides much of the information for this column, with additional tips from Bruce Portzer.

--- MORE STATION NEWS ---

- 1050 CJNB SK North Battleford – 6/16 – Is back up and on the air again. 1050 CJNB is announcing it is now back up and running again, after being down for the past week or so due to transmitter issues. The station was plagued with technical challenges after lightning storms caused the radio transmitter to fail. Program Director Nic Fransoo said the lightning storm went through the area and resulted in an immense power surge that struck the station's main transmitter in early June. "What happens with the transmitter is that lots of its different components have dependencies," he explained. "There are different parts of the transmitter that rely on other parts that are working. So, when that surge hit, it cooked many different dependent parts." (Angela Brown – Battlefords Now)

- 1290 CFRW MB Winnipeg – 06/14 1100 – Announcement loop saying that CFRW would be leaving the air due to the situation on AM radio . . . then on 06/15 @ 0900 – Noted as OFF THE AIR the day after the announcement of them leaving the air. COMMENTS: Well, another local off the air here. Only two left here: CJOB 680 and CBW 990. Three stations (see DX Loggings below) were battling back and forth to see who was on top. None were new but they were very rare while CFRW was on air. (SMA-MB)

CZECHIA: Country Radio is moving from 1062 to 639 kHz (20 kW), where it will use the former Czech Radio high power medium wave masts at Liblice. A second transmitter will be used on 954 kHz (5 kW) at České Budejovice – the transmitter has been carrying DRM tests but will carry Country Radio in AM. Veries from 1030 WBZ, 1240 WKIQ, 770 WABC. One new report and five follow up reports sent out in June. 7/2 staying up for MM DX and caught Spanish music on 1160 at 11:49 PM. Nice ID for WEWC a few minutes after midnight, new. I had heard before but no ID. Think they are running day power as they weren't heard before and now seem to be somewhat regular. Also mention 92.1 and 97.5. Nothing else heard strong enough to ID. Martin

Noise, electrical storms and lack of time have kept me away from DX. From the paucity of contributions to the column, I'm wondering if that's happening to many of the members too? It's disappointing to read about the steady decline of Canadian AM stations, but perhaps that will leave some frequencies open for other discoveries when conditions improve? Let us know what radio related activities you are participating in this summer. 73

Radio History Revisited: Meet The Press

Kenneth D. MacHarg

With the recent announcement that Chuck Todd will leave the post of moderator of the long-running Meet the Press program on NBC television (and radio) it was interesting to note that while some news stories mentioned that it is one of television's longest running programs they failed to mention that the program was first broadcast on radio. Perhaps that was because reporters weren't aware of that history or that the original radio program was not on the NBC radio network but on the then-competitive Mutual Broadcasting System.

The program began on Mutual in 1945 as American Mercury Presents: Meet the Press, a program to promote The American Mercury, a magazine that Lawrence E. Spivak, an American publisher and journalist, purchased in 1935. Before the program aired, Spivak asked journalist Martha Rountree, who had worked in radio and had been employed by Spivak as a roving editor for the magazine, to critique the plans for the new radio show. Based on her advice, Mrs. Rountree created the program that she called The American Mercury, on October 5, 1945. On November 6, 1947, while still on the Mutual Broadcasting System, the television rights to the program were purchased by General Foods, which began to air the show on the NBC television network with the title shortened to simply Meet the Press; the radio version also adopted the new name.

Meet the Press was originally presented as a 30-minute press conference with a single guest and a panel of questioners. Its first guest was James Farley, who served as Postmaster General, Democratic National Committee chairman and campaign manager to Franklin Delano Roosevelt under the first two terms of the New Deal Administration. Rountree served as its first host, the program's only female moderator to date. She stepped down on November 1, 1953, and was succeeded by Ned Brooks, who remained as moderator until his retirement on December 26, 1965. Spivak became the moderator on January 1, 1966, moving up from his role as a permanent panelist. He retired on November 9, 1975, on a special one-hour edition that featured a sitting president as guest for the first time, in this case Gerald Ford. The next week, William "Bill" Monroe, previously a weekly panelist like Spivak had been years before, took over as moderator and stayed until June 2, 1984.

For the next seven and a half years, the program then went through a series of hosts as it struggled in the ratings against ABC's This Week with David Brinkley. Roger Mudd and Marvin Kalb served as co-moderators, followed by Monroe for a year, followed by Chris Wallace (who would later go on to a much longer run as host of the rival program Fox News Sunday) from 1987 to 1988. Garrick Utley, then hosting Weekend Today, concurrently, hosted Meet the Press from 1989 through December 1, 1991. All this occurred despite the increasing ratings of NBC News' other programs (and those of the network generally) during that period. The program originally aired at noon Eastern Time every Sunday, acting as an awkward lead-in program to the then-half-hour NFL Live pre-game show in the fall and early winter, before moving to a 9:00 a.m. slot by the early 1990s when Meet the Press expanded to an hour.

While Meet The Press paved the way, other networks soon followed offering their own version. Sunday morning's Big Four — NBC's "Meet the Press," CBS's "Face the Nation," ABC's "This Week" and "Fox News Sunday" — were an integral part of the Beltway news ecosystem. Leading political figures, hungry for the big soapbox and establishment clamored for bookings and sometimes made agenda-setting news.

The conventional wisdom was that no politician could launch a viable presidential campaign without first passing "the Russert Primary," a lengthy grilling by the late Tim Russert.

Meet the Press still draws big audiences, averaging 2.57 million total viewers in the 2021 to 2022 broadcast season. Among total viewers, the show trailed its competitors on CBS ("Face the Nation") and ABC ("This Week"), though it came in second place in the age demographic most valued by advertisers.

Mr. Todd will be replaced in September by Kristin Welker, currently an NBC correspondent. Welker will be the first Black moderator of the program and the first woman since Rountree left in 1953.
