Dear Mr. Geary,

This letter is to confirm that that radio station you heard on December 8th was indeed WRLT-AM, broadcasting at 5000 watts (non-directional) from Madison, Tennessee. The reason you lost our signal shortly after 5pm is that we switch to a 1000 watt directional pattern at sunset, local time.

Since the time you heard us in December, the call letters of WRLT-AM have been changed. We're now known as WHNK-AM, "The Home of the Country Legends," broadcasting traditional country music 24 hours a day. We are currently in the middle of major repairs on our transmitter and four towers at our Madison transmitter site, and I would be interested in hearing from you again if you can pick us up in the future.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink that reads "Dennis Thibodeaux" with a stylized flourish at the end.
